C READING COMPREHENSION

TASK 1

Read the text below and decide if the statements 1-10 are true or false. Make a tick (✓) under TRUE or FALSE.

The tricks of food photographers

We've all seen the gorgeous photos of colourful vegetables and freshly-baked cakes in books and magazines. When we see these pictures we believe that if we follow the recipe, we can make food that looks like that, too. However, not many people realise the strange things that photographers use to change a simple plate of food into the mouth-watering dishes in the photos.

Food is one of the most difficult subjects for photographers. Hot food goes cold, cold food goes dry, and frozen food melts, making it useless. But don't worry, because food photographers have the tools to deal with these problems. They don't just visit photography shops. They also visit art shops, garages and pharmacies. As well as camera equipment, a photographer's bag includes motor oil to help sauces look brighter, hairspray to stop cakes looking dry, and a spoonful of shoe polish to help meat look cooked.

There are a few rules about food that photographers have to follow. If a photo is going to become part of an advert, rules say the food which the company wants to advertise must be the real thing. However, any other food in the photo doesn't need to be real. Plastic 'fruit' or glass 'ice' in a drink next to the real dessert is acceptable, according to the rules. Of course, there are some photographers who choose not to use non-food items in their photos, even when the rules allow it, but that does make their job much more challenging.

Whether a food photographer believes in using tricks or not, one thing is definitely true: food photography needs a lot of patience.
